This is the fourth and final volume of Randy Steffen's monumental work, The Horse Soldier. With this volume the work brings together "in nearly a thousand pages of text and nearly 500 illustrations" a comprehensive history of the cavalryman's dress, horse equipment, weaponry - every item the horse soldier wore, carried, or used "from Revolutionary times to World War II. Volume IV covers the final twenty-five years "the World War I years, when the United States Cavalry fought for the first time as part of an allied force; the peacetime years, when the cavalry was largely a "show" force; and World War II, when mechanization finally outmoded the horse soldier, and the horse was traded for the tank. The cavalry became history.
